

RAMSA

Meghan L. McDermott, AIA
Partner, Robert A.M. Stern Architects

Meghan McDermott joined Robert A.M. Stern Architects in 1998 and has been a Partner in the firm since 2008. Ms. McDermott's work has focused on master planning and the design of highly sustainable office and mixed-use developments in the U.S. and internationally, including the 57-story LEED-Gold Comcast Center in Philadelphia; Tour Carpe Diem at La Défense outside Paris, the first office building to both achieve LEED-Platinum certification and exceed French HQE regulations; the 14-acre master plan and Phase I office tower at Horizon Center in Gurgaon, India; and office buildings in Rio de Janeiro and Mexico City. Her projects include the master plan for the redevelopment of the 1,200-acre Philadelphia Navy Yard, a joint venture of developer Liberty Property Trust and the Philadelphia Industrial Development Corporation, along with the LEED double-Platinum Five Crescent Drive office building for GlaxoSmithKline at the Navy Yard. Ms. McDermott is currently at work on the Waterfront Master Plan in Camden, New Jersey, a mixed-used development that will create over two million square feet of office, hospitality, retail, and residential space; and a 325-acre master plan for a mixed-use development in Georgia that will revitalize a historic town center and create ten million square feet of additional residential, office, hospitality and retail space.

Ms. McDermott has lectured at the Harvard Business School, the University of Pennsylvania, Columbia University, and the AIA NY Center for Architecture, as well as at various professional conferences in the US and Europe including the Greenbuild International Summit and the Urban Land Institute's National Place Making Conference. Her work has been published in Architectural Record, Architect, Metropolis, The Architect's Newspaper, New York, and The New York Times. Ms. McDermott received her Bachelor of Architecture degree from the University of Minnesota and her Master of Architecture degree from Syracuse University.